Newly installed council picks Dorman as mayor

by Lisa Parsons

At a special meeting Monday night, three city council members were installed and Jim Dorman was re-elected mayor.

Brian Cochran, Lois Heiserman and Craig Lake, top vote getters in the recent election, were sworn in by Finance Director/ City Clerk Karen Huff. Each of the recently elected councilmembers asked members of their family to join them as they were sworn in. Cochran was accompanied by his two children, Heiserman by her husband of 51 years and Lake by seven family members, including his father, Dell, a former councilman.

Mayor Jim Dorman said goodbye to Councilmember Karen O'Rourke, who opted not to seek re-election.

"This is your last meeting and I don't know if that's a sigh of relief from you," Dorman said, "You're going to be missed on the council. You made you contribution to the city. We hope you continue to come back and see us and offer us advice. Just because you're off the council doesn't mean you can't come back and participate."

O'Rourke was presented with a plaque from the city featuring the new city seal and logo, which she was instrumental in establishing.

The first item of business the newly formed council attended to was the election of the mayor. Councilman Robert Burns was unable to attend the special meeting, but he asked that City Manager Jack Shelver read a letter by him to the council.

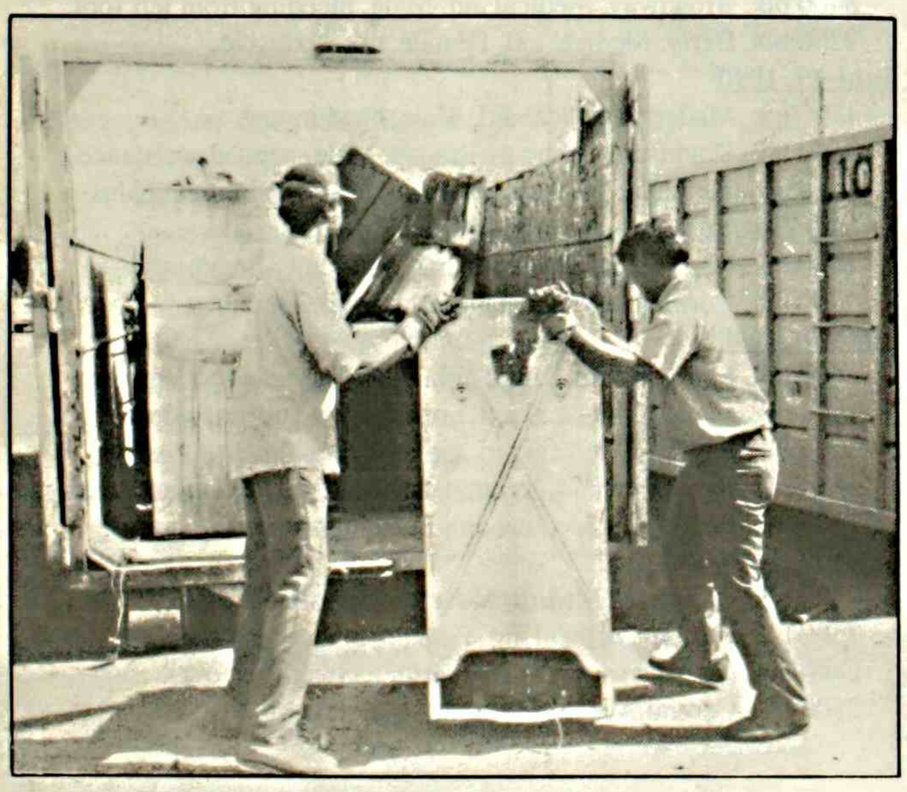
"In view of my long-held position that the mayor of Lemon Grove should be selected by the voters, which means the candidate receiving the most votes at election time, I thus would request that in my absence someone of those councilpersons present nominate Lois Heiserman for the office of mayor," stated Burns in his letter.

Heiserman, who has served on the council since 1980, promptly declined the nomination saying, "I believe I am more effective needling from the side."

Councilman Cochran nominated James Dorman, who has served as mayor since the city's incorporation in 1977, and the council voted unanimously in his favor. Heiserman was unanimously re-elected mayor pro-tem.

Incumbents Lois Heiserman and Brian Cochran and newcomer Craig Lake, winners of the recent City Council election, were sworn in to begin their four-year terms as Lemon Grove council members.

Lemon Grove cleans up!



Approximately 584 vehicles unloaded their unwanted items at Lemon Grove's Clean Up Day last Saturday. About 69 cars and 515 trucks full of odds and ends ranging from refrigerators and lawn mowers to bicycles and dog houses took advantage of the low disposal fee and cleaned up their homes and garages. A spokesperson for the City, Leslie Frazier, said this year's turnout was considerably larger than last year's and 10 more dumpsters were filled this year than last.

Not everything was destined for the dump though, anything that could be recycled or salvaged was carefully separated by Edco employees or people who had come to dump items of their own and couldn't resist someone else's "junk."

One Lemon Grove resident said, "I came here to throw away stuff and I end up taking stuff home. I got a $160 sliding glass door for my patio that someone was throwing away," he said with a grin. "I think I'll take this couch home too."

Heartland Fire Agencies warn fireworks dangers

Each year, more than 20,000 people are injured and of those, 10,000 people are injured significantly enough to be treated in hospital emergency rooms due to fireworks. Half of these victims are children-under the age of 15. San Diego County receives its share of fireworks injuries as well as related fires. Fireworks are hot. Deadly hot. Sparklers, bottle rockets, snappers and firecrackers cause more injuries than any other fireworks-usually at least second degree burns. Sparklers burn at a maiming 3000°F.

Fireworks are unpredictable. Fireworks are not foolproof. They can fire prematurely or erratically - or in the direction of unsuspecting victims. One simple string of 25 firecrackers packs the explosive power of at least three sticks of dynamite.

All fireworks in San Diego County are illegal. On June 24, 1984, San Diego County passed an ordinance prohibiting the possession, storage, sale, manufacturing, furnishing or use of any exploding firework without a permit to do so.

Under San Diego County Fireworks Ordinance any person violating any of the provisions or failing to comply with the ordinance shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed $1,000 or imprisonment for a period of not more than one year or both.

The burn injuries and the illegality are not the only issues concerning the dangers of fireworks. San Diego County is very dry and considered "semi-desert" in climate, and with our "Santa Ana" conditions, our county is one of the most dangerous in the nation in regard to brush fires. Each year millions of dollars of property damage is reported due to the use of illegal fireworks.

Have a safe 4th of July holiday. Please visit one of the many fireworks displays produced by professionals who use every safety precaution.

Toilet reef proposed by Helix president

Describing the concept as a "win-win situation," Helix Water District President Harold Ball used a June 21 press conference to unveil a plan that would utilize discarded water-wasting toilets as part of an artificial off-shore fish habitat reef. Basing the concept on the belief that replacement of current large tank toilets with low flush, water conserving toilets could save up to 25,000 gallons of water per toilet, Ball noted that the positive use of the discarded toilets to improve the environment could well encourage such a changeover. "This plan," said Ball," will give Mr and Mrs. Homeowner a rationale for getting rid of a perfectly good piece of machinery."

Ball was graphic in describing the water savings involved in using the newer toilets, pointing out that the 10,000 acre-foot Lake Cuyamaca could be refilled six times every year with the water saved. In addition, he noted that discarded toilets are significant burden on landfills and are extremely difficult for homeowners to get rid of.

Ball stated that the State Fish and Game Deputy Director is enthusiastic about the proposal which would create an artificial reef marine habitat out of rock and the porcelain portions of the toilets, some four miles southwest of Point Loma. He added that Santa Monica is seeking to develop a similar reef as part of its conservation program.

Despite encouragement from the State Fish and Game Department, there are still many aspects of the concept to be worked out. In addition to the need for a regulatory agency to work with, provisions must be made for storage of the porcelain fixtures until the reef can be built. Ball also expressed the hope that a rebate program such as that now working in Los Angeles could be instituted in San Diego to encourage citizens to make the change.

In brief comments prior to presenting the reef plan, Ball outlined some of the efforts being made to improve water delivery from the North. He pointed to the fact that "plumbing" to San Diego has doubled under the current program with three new pumps scheduled to take effect in late 1991. All this new development, would, he stated, "with a few good northern storms, deliver lots of water to San Diego."

Chief Auto Parts opens

Chief Auto Parts held the Grand Opening of it's new 36,000 square-foot Lemon Grove store on Friday and Saturday.

Saturday's Grand Opening Celebration included music from the KGB Van, a clown, give-aways and the chance to register to win a mini-car. The Mt. Miguel Band distributed soft drinks and Domino's pizza for a small donation.

Restaurant Review - Viggiano's Ristorante

by The Gallivanting Gourmand

The flavor of authentic Italy is centrally located, yet tucked quietly into a small commercial center in the heart of Lemon Grove. If you haven't yet discovered it, you'll have to look for it, but Viggiano's Ristorante, offering dinners to be savored, is well worth the brief search.

Pasta lovers will flock here, for it is rare to find creamy sauces that actually cling jealously to the al dente noodles, all the way to the mouth, rather than puddling uselessly in the plate.

My adventuresome dinner partners and I opened with a Di Caesar salad ($4.95), shared between us. A classic in any event, this generous version is truly worthy of it's tradition. A five-fork salad, if ever I've met one.

Although we haven't yet sampled all of the entrees, we can recommend the Vongole ($7.50), a creamy clam, wine and herb sauce served with linguine; the Pollo Alfredo ($7.95), your choice of linguine or fettucine with tender sauteed chicken breast pieces, and finished in a cheese Alfredo sauce. One partner-in-discovery claims the Polpette ($6.50), spaghetti and meatballs with marinara sauce, a bit spicy for his conservative palate, but he has ordered it more than once, and opts for Tums for dessert. Another Partner proclaimed Viggiano's Lasagna ($6.00) to rate "Best Around", and a second Guest concurred.

Viggiano's also offers veal and chicken, or eggplant Parmigiana ($7.50 to $9.95), a selection of Spaghetti choices ($5.50 to $6.75), and tempting baked dishes ($6.00 to $8.25). Most dinners are served with sauteed vegetables, or spaghetti, and baskets of garlic bread baked daily on the premises.

Calzone and Pizza, the staple item of many Italian restaurants, will be made any way you like it (pineapple pizza, anyone?!) and several varieties of sandwiches are available.

Beer and wine offerings are adequate for the general palate. Consider sampling the golden Italian Beer, Peroni ($2.25).

Several desserts (Spumoni, Cannolo, to name two) are also offered, but we have always been overfull to be tempted.

The service is solicitous and well-paced.

Soft, Italian-flavored music almost makes amends for the plastic tablecloths and uninspiring wall decor, but perhaps we will see improvement as success grows, as it is sure to do.

We'll rate this one three forks, plus two tines, because the clinging sauces almost outbalance the decor.

Owned and operated by Lou (the host) and Sandy (the chef) Viggiano, this touch of Italy is located at 2611 Lemon Grove Avenue (at Cypress), next to a dance studio and across from a coin-wash. (Please don't fault the Viggiano's for the 'view'). Open Tuesdays through Sunday, 5 p.m. until 9 p.m. Closed Monday

Commentary

Independence Day

by Paul Treske

In a time of spurious super-patriotism on the one hand, and unknowing apathy on the other, it may be well on this Independence Day to look back upon that July 4, 1776 and the months that preceded it. It seems today as if we more frequently refer to the holiday as the Fourth of July, with its concurrent picnics and fireworks, rather than the more reflective "Independence Day" with its thoughts of statehood painfully achieved.

Those were complex days for the second Continental Congress in the early months of 1776. The "pop history" of today tends to deal briefly with results and show little or nothing of what went before. Among those men gathered in Philadelphia in 1776 there was doubt, confusion and painfully divided loyalties.

As they discussed the question of independence, actual fighting was well under way. Concord and Lexington were already history, as were Breeds and Bunker Hills. Ethan Allen had already taken Fort Ticonderoga and in January a group of patriots had burned Norfolk, Virginia to the ground to keep it from falling into Tory hands. Despite this, a last message was still sent to George III in England asking for some sort of negotiations. Only when England's response was to brand them traitors, was Richard Henry Lee of Virginia able to finally state for all to irrevocably hear, "These United States are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states."

The final Declaration of Independence, penned by Thomas Jefferson and then debated and almost lost before a painful compromise removed anti-slavery wording, was agreed to on July 4, 1776. Only two signed that day, the others, several days later. The men who signed that document had no guarantee that they would succeed, only that they must try. And so they "mutually pledged to each other, our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

But the Declaration is far more than merely a document of separation from Mother England. It is also a wondrous vision of a different kind of society from that of the old world. It is a document that calls for a society where all men are created equal with rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Revolutionary words indeed!

The men who signed that document were not supermen. True, some were brilliant like Adams, Jefferson and Franklin. And others were firebrands for liberty like Samuel Adams and Richard Henry Lee. But many were just men, struggling, doubting, fearing and hoping. Men of wealth and standing who, in pledging their lives, fortunes and honor stood to lose everything if their cause failed. The war was going poorly when they signed, and there was little factual cause to believe that a ragged factional army of colonists could overcome the might of England. And yet they signed. And it is their fearful courage in taking a stand for a principle, against overwhelming odds, that we celebrate on Independence Day.

July 4th has been most often called "the birthday of our nation." If so, it was as painful and yet hopeful as any human birth. It is therefore most important that today, in 1990, we think of the men of the second Continental Congress, not as bloodless icons, but as very real men. Men who, in that early spring and summer of 1776, performed an act of incredible bravery; more brave yet, because they were men who feared and doubted, but nevertheless acted.

In so doing, they set the pattern for the nation to follow and in a way, assured its greatness.

From Where I Sit

Dad's Old Dodge

by Frank Andrews

To celebrate the great day when I was born back in '22 (a vintage year), instead of gifts of frankincense and myrrh, my good old Daddy bought himself a brand new, shiny black, Dodge Brothers automobile for the outlandish price of $1,000 - when Model T Fords were going for $450.

"I put all of the family savings into that big beauty so this young'un better be worth it. We tried over 15 long years for me to get my first kid and my first car," was Dad's bragging remark. He had the Dodge for 7 years but of course he was stuck with me for a whole lifetime.

I can still remember that elegant shiny black sedan. The engine purred like a happy kitten. The engine was 4 cylinders but because of the gear ratio in the complicated stick-shift gear box it was not noted for speed but long on power. Driving those days with the lack of good hard surfaced roads could be hazardous and needed much power to traverse.

The large box-shape of the vehicle made the interior very roomy. The seats were genuine leather and could even withstand "Kid Abuse." There was an artificial flower in a pretty vase hanging on either side of the back doors. It was even equipped with window shades for all the rear windows (all the comforts of home).

Dad kept that "Black Beauty" glistening and would never drive it in inclement weather. A couple incidents concerning his Dodge and the neighbors really stand out in my memories.

My father liked to imbibe on the nectar of the grape for special occasions, so he decided to ferment his own. "Your grandmother gave me her wine recipe from the old country so I'm going to try it," Dad announced to his only son, Frankie.

The instructions for best fermentation were to bury the keg of grapes in the ground for even temperature. Living in the tenements the only available ground was the dirt floor of the garage. So Dad and I dug the deep hole and sunk the juice.

After Pop had parked the Dodge in the garage on this exceptionally hot, humid night and all were fast asleep there came a loud blast of near atomic proportions. The grapes could not stand still any longer and blew it's cork.

We ran out to the garage along with a part of the neighborhood to view the body, a black Dodge covered from bumper to bumper with ugly clinging grapes. What a mess I had to help clean up!

Another neighborhood shaker was also on a hot spring night, when all the tenants had their storm windows on the alley side pushed-out open wide for cool air. Dad came home in the wee hours after a night out with the boys unaware of all the open windows. Going at a pretty good clip he managed to bust every window in the tenement row.

There again was a crashing sound that woke up all the immediate neighbors who came running to catch and kill the inebriated culprit. The old Dodge was made like a Sherman Tank, so it withstood all of Dad's shenanigans and came out with flying colors, shiny black.

by Brad Mills, President, Casa de Oro Business Association

Last week the House of Representatives failed to pass a Constitutional Amendment to protect our flag. During debate on the issue, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., stated "We can't vote to protect the flag and avoid eroding the Bill of Rights at the same time." House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Il, stated "Anyone who truly believes that the First Amendment is so fragile that this amendment can in effect kill it, or that the American people are so weak in their love of free speech that they will trample on their own First Amendment rights, doesn't have faith in the people."

A little research will reveal that the First Amendment prohibits "abridging the freedom of speech." That's right, SPEECH! The dictionary defines speech as: something spoken, vocal communications, conversation, public address and printed material. Nowhere in the definition of speech is a physical act defined as speech. It is difficult to understand how a person who performs the PHYSICAL ACT of burning our flag is vocally communicating by that physical act. However, if that person is speaking words (while burning the flag), whatever those words might be, those words, SPEECH, are protected by the First Amendment.

So many people are afraid that a Constitutional Amendment to prohibit burning our flag would dilute our First Amendment right of free speech. The Casa de Oro Business Association, the Spring Valley Chamber of Commerce and San Diego County are all behind and involved with graffiti removal. The same people who are afraid of this Constitutional Amendment would say that the offensive gang markings sprayed on your walls and fences are free speech. The California Penal Code calls graffiti application malicious mischief and punishes these acts by fines and/or jail time. But, thanks to the House and the U.S. Supreme Court, it's legal to burn our flag, isn't it?

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges Back on San Diego ice

The sportin' dream of San Diego snowbirds, transplanted northeasterners and converted western hockey fans seems to be turning the corner from endless talk to optimistic reality.

Sports Arena operators Harry Cooper, Richard Esquinas and Vin Ciruzzi were awarded an expansion franchise in the International Hockey League with a commitment to play this fall. Esquinas, Ciruzzi and Cooper named Don Waddell, a former Minor League player, coach and general manager, as director of hockey operations for the new San Diego club.

So far, that's it. The rest is a blank. The team has no name, no players, no schedule and no connection with the development program of any National Hockey League team.

But then, everybody has to start somewhere. And what better place to start a hockey team that San Diego, where diehards like Ron Oaks have kept the dream alive and the spirit renewed amid the town's once thriving hockey fan clubs.

Oaks has been the "voice" of hockey mania in San Diego since Bob Breitbard reintroduced the sport to America's Finest City back in 1966.

In fact, "Oaksey" was the Gulls to San Diego fans for nearly the first month of their opening season. The Sports Arena wasn't quite ready when the 1966 campaign got underway and the Gulls played their entire first month on the road.

The voice of Ron Oaks introduced the excitement and violent action of hockey to thousands of San Diego listeners in that first month, building a network of fandom that still exists.

Old Gull fan clubs still hold picnics and social gatherings in their widely spaced out corners of San Diego county.

Oaks is a partisan and his exciting call of "...he breaks open, he shoots, he SCORES!!!" created a demand for tickets, just so listeners could go and see what he was talking about.

Oaks is quick to tell you that hockey did well at the San Diego gate, beating out the San Diego Rockets of the National Basketball Association in attendance.

"Hockey didn't fail in San Diego," says Oaks. "The Western Hockey Hockey League went under, even though the Gulls were out-drawing the Los Angeles Kings in attendance."

San Diego's "yet-to-be-named" hockey team has a mountain of problems to overcome before they open the pages and begin recording entries in our local hockey history ledger.

But, problems are just conditions to be worked out and/or matters to be adjusted. San Diego State basketball and the Sockers schedules are matters worthy of serious attention.

Cooper and company had to post a $2 million line-of-credit to cover first year operating expenses. That certainly should be judged as a "serious" step in addressing their tasks.

The new hockey club's owners could do themselves a ton of service if they gave local hockey fans a chance to relive their "Hockey Mania" memories by returning Ron Oaks to their "Ice-sight" broadcast booth.

Hockey fans have long memories and somehow it just wouldn't seem like hockey without "Oaksey's" high-energy call, "...He shoots,...He SCORES!!!" to highlight a hometown victory.

It's The Law

by Dennis L Polito

Question: My husband and I own our own home as joint tenants. Is this advisable?

Answer: Although many couples are instructed to take title to their residence as "joint tenants" to avoid probate, this advice can be costly in an appreciating market. Additional income tax on the sale of real property may be avoided if a husband and wife hold the property as "community property" rather than as "joint tenants." Moreover, holding title in this fashion may not trigger probate.

The benefits of holding title as community property can be demonstrated by example. Assume that Mr. and Mrs. Green purchased a home in 1975 for $100,000 (considered the "basis" of the resident). Presently, their home is valued at $500,000. Mr. Green dies and Mrs. Green decides to sell their home and move into a condominium. As a general rule, income tax is paid on the difference between the basis and the sale price. What will be the income tax result?

If the property is held in joint tenancy, Mr. Green's half of the basis in the residence is "stepped-up," that is, increased without tax consequence, to the fair market value on the date of Mr. Green's death. The new stepped-up basis in Mr. Green's interest is his half of the original basis ($50,000) plus his half of the appreciation on the date of his death $200,000, or $250,000. However, Mrs. Green's basis in her half of the property remains one-half of the original cost, $50,000. The total basis is therefore stepped up to $300,000. If the property is sold for $500,000, Mrs. Green will then recognize taxable gain in the amount of $200,000.

If, however, the property is held as community property, both halves of the basis in the residence are stepped up on the death of the first spouse. Thus, the stepped-up basis will be $500,000 (the fair market value on Mr. Green's death). Upon the sale of the property, Mrs. Green will then recognize no taxable gain.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This week's movie: Betsy's Wedding

Eddie Hopper has a dream. His youngest daughter, Betsy, is getting married, and he has visions of a glorious wedding: huge and extravagant, the pinnacle of his career as a father. He sees the fair Betsy softly walking down the aisle in a flowing white gown, past hundreds upon hundreds of smiling guests, who quietly enjoy what is surely a perfect wedding.

But Eddie's grandiose dreams are just that...dreams. For not only does he find it impossible to satisfy the wants and traditions of everyone involved, (including his middle-class Italian Catholic relatives, upperclass rich WASP future in-laws, and Jewish wife), but he is financially unstable. He resorts to asking his sleazy brother-in-law, Oscar, for a $30,000 loan. Oscar agrees to give Eddie the money, but only if they become business partners, a deal which forces Eddie to work along side an assortment of underworld scum-bags and hoodlums. Matters continue to get worse until the day of the wedding itself, which takes place on a rainy day, in a leaking tent, in about two feet of water. Ah, how perfect.

Alan Alda is superb as the beguiled Eddie, drawing on his characteristically sarcastic charm, much in the same way as he did as Hawkeye Pierce in television's M•A•S•H. "Betsy's Wedding" is Alda's best work since the 1981 smash "The Four Seasons," and although the film is fashioned as an ensemble piece, Alda easily outshines his supporting cast. He also serves as the film's writer and director, again proving himself as one of Hollywood's finest talents.

Madeline Kahn co-stars as Eddie's wife Lola, the only level head in the family, which is a pleasant change from her usual off-center roles. Molly Ringwald is pretty boring as Betsy, and although she is the title character, she doesn't have much to do...which is a good thing. Additional support comes from Joey Bishop as the ghost of Eddie's father, Joe Pesci as Oscar, and Ally Sheedy as Eddie's eldest daughter.

"Betsy's Wedding" faces stiff competition this summer, with all the sequels and "Dick Tracy" types, but it has a chance at being a huge sleeper hit. I only hope it stays in theatres long enough for the word to get around.

Robocop 2

I guess the original "Robocop" was a good movie, but does it really deserve a sequel? I think Hollywood is in an "if it explodes we'll take it" mood.

The film starts out entertaining, expanding on the conflict of Murphy the man vs. Murphy the machine, but quickly deteriorates to a lot of gore and violence and machine guns and stupidity.

I hope it doesn't make any money. That's the only way we'll be spared from "Robocop 3."

Theater group awards "Aubreys"

Both Lamplighters, La Mesa's community theatre, and OCTAD I of Spring Valley and College Grove were well represented among the winners of "Aubrey" awards at the 25th Annual Awards Ceremony of the Associated Community Theaters on June 23.

A special award, which received a standing ovation, was given to Lamplighter's Cleo Anderberg for her untiring efforts throughout the local theatre scene. Anderberg was also elected to the ACT Hall of Fame.

Three of OCTAD I's winners came from their recent production of "Death of Salesman." Recognized as best were Director Don Pugh, Producer Ellen Cuadra and lead actor Martin Gerrish. Gerrish received a second "Aubrey" as producer of "Much Ado about Nothing.

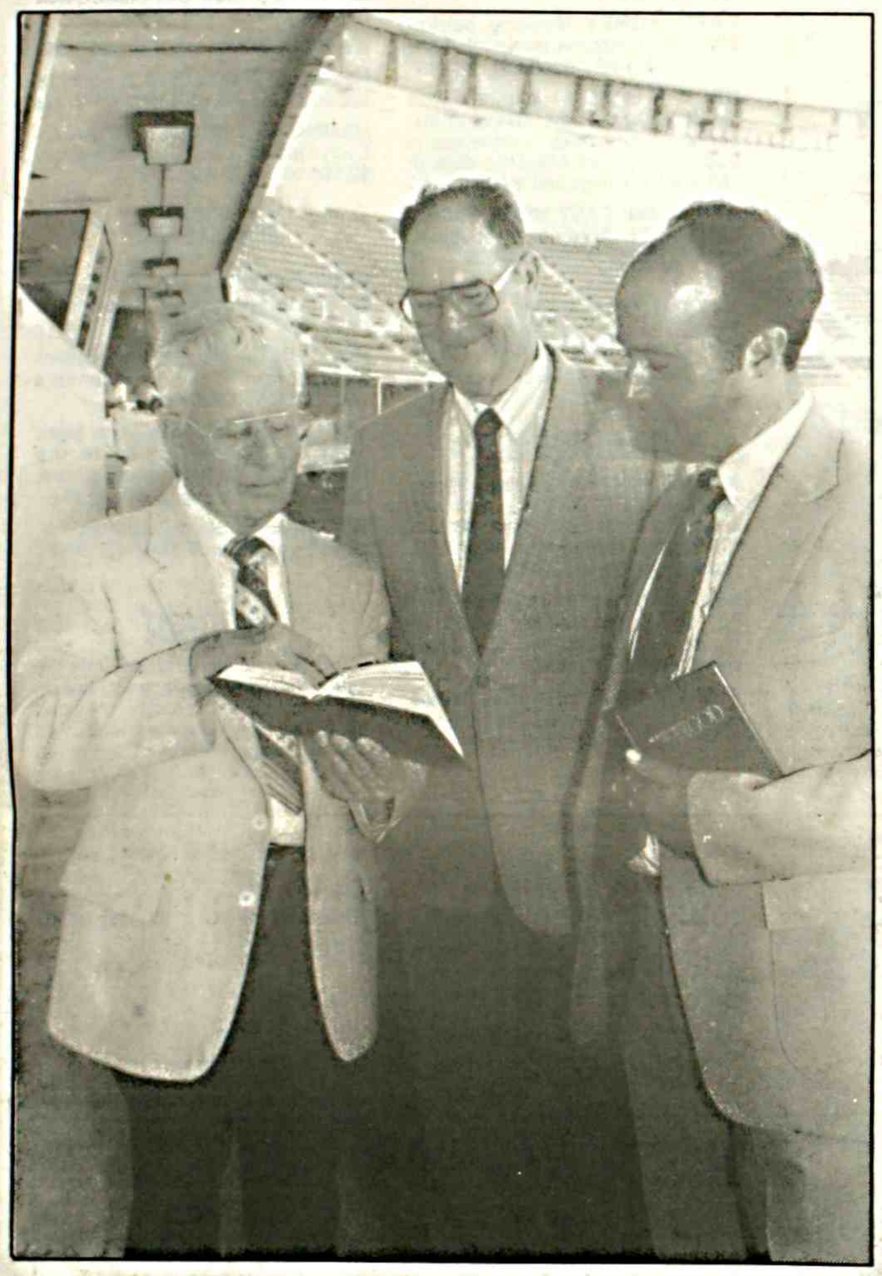
Lemon Grove resident wins award at Fair

Marie Alexander (right), of Lemon Grove, accepts the Mirretta K. Peterson Memorial Award for the best piece of lace at the Del Mar Fair from Penny Feike of Linda Vista, Peterson's daughter. The award, which was started this year, is sponsored by the San Diego Lace Guild.



Witnesses wind-up successful convention

Harold Richter, left, of Spring Valley, makes a point from the new book, "Mankind's Search for God," which was released last Saturday during the four-day Jehovah's Witnesses District Convention in San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium. In center is Ralph Jones of La Mesa, and at right is Victor Rogers of Lemon Grove. All are Elders in their respective congregations.

Now you'll pay a tire disposal fee. What will they think of next?

After July 1, when you buy new or used tires, you will be charged a 25-cent per tire fee on the old tires you leave with the dealer.

That fee is required under the new California Tire Recycling Act (AB 1843-1989) effective July 1, 1990 through June 30, 1999. The act will be administered by the Integrated Waste Management Board which last week signed a contract with the Board of Equalization for collection of the fees from an estimated 30,000 businesses which sell new or used tires.

The 25-cent fee on the 20 million tires discarded each year in California could raise up to $5 million in revenue. The money collected will be deposited in the newly created California Tire Recycling Management Fund and used by the Waste Management Board to:

Reduce the number of tires deposited in landfills;

Increase the use of shredding for storage;

Reclaim and recycle used tires and used tire components into such items as roofing adhesives, erosion control materials, and rubberized asphalt.

Businesses or individuals who would like more information on the tire disposal fee may call the Board of Equalization's Excise Tax Division at (916) 739-2584. For more information on tire recycling programs, contact the Integrated Waste Management Board at (916) 322-3330.

Portraits of pageant winners on display

For the fifth year, Light Impressions, a highly-respected and award-winning San Diego photography studio, has given a gift portrait to each of the winners of the thirty six area pageants from which the Fairest Of The Fair is selected.

You can see these portraits, including Lemon Grove's own Wendy Bailey, beautifully displayed in the northeast corner of the Flower and Garden Pavilion at the Del Mar Fair from now through July 4th.

Jervaun Marino, Miss La Mesa and this year's Fairest Of The Fair, sits in front of this attractive display of pageant winners for a period of time each day, signing autographs and talking with children and passersby.

Dennis and Les Jones, brothers and owners of Light Impressions are the photographers. "This is quite a challenge." says Dennis, "Our goal is to do a beautiful portrait of each area queen without any two of the images looking similar." As one can see walking through the garden display, Les and Dennis have creatively captured each of the 36 girls in a different setting, pose or mood.

This is a four month long project which culminates in the display at the fair, so the photographers get to know the girls quite well.

"It's exciting to watch them grow during this time and to see them on pageant night. Everyone is a winner."

Fran Scarborough, the director of the Fairest Of The Fair pageant, is extremely pleased with the portraits. "This is a fabulous gift that is given to the girls. At the pageant, which was May 25th this year, everyone gets to see them for the first time. Every year it's such a thrill, and each year the portraits are even better that the previous years'."
